From the time I was a young girl, my parents placed an importance on history. History of our country and of our own family were talked about and we were encouraged to learn and grow in that knowledge. As we grew, family vacations were to historical places such as presidential homes, history centers and burial memorials. We visited three presidential homes— Abraham Lincoln, John F. Kennedy and Ulysses S. Grant. As our own family grew, we continued to visit historical sites with our own children, encouraging love of country and the origins of our being as citizens and of our own family.

I love history. For me, it helps me to discover why we do the things that we do, why we react the way that we react and gives importance to the simple things in our lives. I am a member of two community groups that have been in existence for over 100 years and have researched the origins of both. I did not grow up in this community, so I did not have firsthand knowledge of some of the events that preceded my moving here. I discovered in researching my adopted community, two women--Suzette Butler and Mary Harper Kline--had extensive records of community service, activism and leadership. They both were born in the late 1800's and lived through "the Women's Movement" of the early 1900's. Both saw importance in educating women about the world that they lived in, had pride and respect in their communities and encouraged leadership in others. They worked in community with other women to start hot meals in the local schools, wrap bandages for injured soldiers and lobby for in-building school nurses, encourage others to learn gardening to increase low-cost food sources at home and to improve conditions in local homes for women and their families. They also worked with local officials to improve parks, discourage unruly behavior of fellow citizens, establish public utilities and offer general education on a variety of topics that would improve lives.

I marvel at what they accomplished during their lifetimes. Neither can be found in a history book like the celebrities, musical, literature and sports figures of today and of other times. Yet, in their own way, they have contributed so much and have carved a history that has become second nature for us. I truly never thought about the plan to put hot lunches in the schools where my children attended until I thought about their efforts and how they worked to get it done.

This causes me to think—What more needs to be done? Who will do it? How will we do it? If we do, will it become second nature to our grandchildren? I have a refrigerator magnet that reads "Well behaved women rarely make history." These ladies made history but the attention that they drew was not to themselves but to the agendas that they sought. I don't expect that my descendants will ever pick up a book and find my biography but I would like to think that the things that I do in this lifetime will make a difference to someone, somewhere, even if my name is never attached to that deed. So, I would like us all to be Suzettes and Mary's and make history in helping others. And who knows...it may get you a paragraph or two in history.

Making a Difference

I talk a lot about Aldi and the grocery store carts. If you don't have an Aldi near you, this growing, chain grocer has customers insert a quarter in a slot to unlock the cart and, when the cart is returned, your quarter is returned to you. I was recently at the store and, as I approached the cart corral, there was an elderly lady fumbling for a quarter to unlock the cart. I offered her the cart that I was returning and she still insisted that I wait for her quarter. I gently told her that my cart had been free and that I was passing this on to the next person. She then gave up the fight to give me the quarter and thanked me profusely, insisting that she, too, would pass it on. Small gesture, big return.

The following week was Christmas week and I made the first of a couple of trips to pick-up last-minute items. As I approached the cart corral, I heard a man calling to me, "Ma'am, Ma'am!" When I turned around, he insisted that I take his cart and, as I offered up the quarter to him, he insisted that I pass it on. The look on his face was a familiar one, of satisfaction in doing a kind gesture. I do admit that it was kind of nice to be on the receiving end. The second time that week, I was loading my groceries in my car when I heard a voice say, "Can I save you some steps and return your cart for you?" With a hand extended with a quarter to replace the one in the cart, I accepted this greeting with a thank you.

My point in using stories like these is simple. Kind gestures that make a difference in people's lives don't have to be grand, highly publicized events. Simple acts of kindness can make a big difference, sometimes more than we know. In each of these instances, gifts of kindness were exchanged and connections were made. I may never encounter any of these individuals again but will remember the kindness that was exchanged and hope that they will, too. I hope that this will encourage you to find ways to Make A Difference. Whether large or small, it can change lives.

2022-2024

PROJECT IN COMMON

Many fruits and vegetables, nuts, oilseed crops, herbs and spices, animal forage, medicinal plants and ornamental plants benefit from insect pollination.

The produce section of grocery stores would be rather empty without the hard work of bees, birds, butterflies, bats, and other pollinators. More than 80 percent of the world's plants need pollinators to survive, including many that provide the food we eat. But today, many pollinators are in trouble.

Somewhere between 75% and 95% of all flowering plants on the earth need help with pollination, they need pollinators. Pollinators provide pollination services to over 180,000 different plant species and more than 1,200 crops. In addition to the food that we eat, pollinators support healthy ecosystems that clean the air, stabilize soils, protect from severe weather, and support other wildlife.

What do we know about their status?

Pollinator populations are changing. Pollution, the misuse of chemicals, disease, and changes in climatic patterns are all contributing to shrinking and shifting pollinator populations.

Pollinators by Numbers

There are 20,000 different types of bees in the world, with an estimated 4,000 bee species native to North America.

How Animal Pollination Works

Pollinators visit flowers in their search for food (nectar and pollen). During a flower visit, a pollinator may accidentally brush against the flower's reproductive parts, unknowingly depositing pollen from another flower. The plant then uses the pollen to produce a fruit or seed. Many plants cannot reproduce without pollen carried to them by foraging pollinators.

Pollinators Are in Trouble

You may have heard that bees are disappearing, and bats are dying. These and other animal pollinators face many challenges in the modern world. Habitat loss, disease, parasites, and environmental contaminants have all contributed to the decline of many species of pollinators.

Who are the pollinators?

Solitary bees, bumble bees, honey bees, birds, bats, butterflies, moths, flies, beetles, wasps, small mammals, and most importantly, bees are pollinators. Others are flies, wasps, and beetles.

What can we do?

Add natural habitat areas into farm systems. They attract more pollinators. Home gardens can and do attract pollinators, and in many cases suburbs and cities have been shown to have more diverse pollinator communities than nearby wildlands. If there are plots and patches of flowers, they will be visited by hungry bees. Pollinator gardening near community gardens also increases urban agricultural yields.

Tuesday Seminar Tour (July 26) 2:30-4:00

Reitz Museum $10.00

The Reitz home is Indiana’s only Victorian Museum and it is one of the country’s finest examples of French Second Empire architecture. John Augustus Reitz was born in Prussia in 1815. Looking for better business opportunities, he came to the US in the 1830’s. Reitz built his own sawmill and became known as “The Lumber Baron.” The Reitz home, completed in 1871, is located in the heart of the city’s downtown Historic Preservation District.

Transportation will be provided and tour will include the Reitz home and carriage house.

Monday Tour (July 25) 9:30-4:00 pm
New Harmony
Lunch at the Red Geranium Restaurant
Shops in Evansville $65.00

Join us as we tour New Harmony, a small historic town located on the Wabash River in Harmony Township, Posey County, Indiana. Whether you're enjoying the quaint beauty of our historic buildings, savoring the distinctive restaurants, browsing the shops, watching a coffee roasting, participating in a cooking class, taking in the wonder of the Roofless Church, walking the labyrinths, attending one of our many events, or using the facilities at Harmony State Park, we predict our welcoming community will earn a spot on your top ten places to visit.

Tuesday (July 26) 9:30-3:30
SPOUSE/FRIENDSTOUR

Evansville Bosse Field $10.00

Bosse Field is home to the Evansville Otters of the Independent Frontier League. Bosse Field is the first municipally owned sports facility in the United States which opened in 1915. Only Fenway Park (Boston) and Wrigley Field (Chicago) are older than Evansville's Bosse Field. It is the site for the filming of "A League of Their Own" in 1992. If you are a sports fan or a history buff, this 100-year-old stadium for America's favorite pastime is a must see.

Lunch - Bru Burger. (If you are a full time Register you will be credited the amount that is allotted for conference lunch, otherwise Lunch is on your own)

Wednesday (July 27) 9:30-3:30
SPOUSE/FRIENDSTOUR

USS LST 325

"Landing Ship Tanks" were integral during many of the key battles of World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam. Your volunteer guide will teach you about the history of LSTs and daily operations. You will go from the deck of the ship down to the bay through the galley, the mess hall, officer's areas and past the large artillery guns.

Evansville Museum of Arts, History and Science

Your docent will lead you on an overview tour of the Evansville Museum. You will be able to explore the Museum's permanent History, Anthropology, Science and Arts galleries.

Lunch - Riverwalk Restaurant

(If you are a full time Register you will be credited the amount that is allotted for conference lunch, otherwise, Lunch is on your own)

Tuesday Educational Sessions

2:00-3:00

Is Death Inevitable?

Annette Lanham-Florida

Rough synopsis - From civic to service to volunteer organizations, membership numbers are drastically declining. Organizations are struggling to attract and/or keep new members. How did we get to this point and can we survive or is death inevitable? We'll examine what factors led to this decline and explore possible options for renewal and recovery.

Positive Vibes

Angela Hicks-Illinois

We live in a world where it is hard to remain positive even for the most upbeat among us. Is it possible to learn to be positive? If so, how? Join Angela for an unusual take on how to give positive vibes!

The Star-Spangled Banner

Kerri J. Carte, MSW, LGSW

Assistant Director

Family & Community Development

Extension Agent

Kanawha County, West Virginia

We will learn the history of The Star Spangled Banner and understand the preservation efforts of The Star Spangled Banner and our national anthem.

Tuesday Educational Sessions

3:30-4:30

Empower Me to be Clutter Free

Jan Gogel-Indiana

Let's purge those paper piles. A large stumbling block in our lives is the amount of paper we accumulate. This lesson will help improve the ability to organize that paper.

A New Twist on Snacks and Appetizers

Diana Stone-Indiana

Health and Human Sciences Educator

Purdue University

Join us in learning new ideas for healthy, creative snacks and appetizers. How can we choose healthier options to serve our family and friends while incorporating fun? The charcuterie boards lend themselves to new trends and ideas for snacks as well as appetizers. Charcuterie boards as well as other bases will serve as spring boards for us to be creative. This will be a time of learning and sharing ideas. Tips for saving money on food products as well as the paper products and decorations will also be presented.

Native Bees

All the Buzz on Our Busiest pollinators

Karen Bell Fox

NVON Vice President, Arkansas

Did you know that there are approximately 4,000 species of native bees in North America? If we want to "Save the Bees", we need to start considering the needs of our native pollinators! Join Karen Fox to learn more about the diversity and importance of our native bee species and their habitats.

The NVON Handbook is printed every three years during the year of the President-Elect by the President. The Handbook is updated annually and placed on the website. The Handbook contains the history of NVON and its historical documents. It contains its Bylaws, mission statement, official colors, and the meaning of the NVON logo. The NVON Board's contact info is included along with a list of NVON Past Executive Committee Members and Appointed Positions, NVON Meetings held at CWC, NVON Conferences and their themes, NVON Projects in Common, NVON Voting Delegates at Triennial Conferences, NVON Members elected to the ACWW Board and NVON Members that have served as CWC Officers.
